It's worth noting that the term "distributed representation" is also used in deep learning, and has the same ambiguities of meaning there. Our sense is that some influential early works (e.g. [5]) may have primarily meant the "independent features are represented independently" decomposability sense, but we believe that other work intends to suggest something similar to what we call superposition.